"Will . . . Henry!", cried Ozymandias. "You can come out now, they have gone. Quickly, follow me!"

In the hut Ozymandias gave them a map. "It's only a rough map, but it will guide you to the White Mountains—but beware—it will be a long and arduous journey. You will have to avoid Tripods and Black Guards. Remember though, . . . only a few ever reach the White Mountains."

The boys took the map and compasses which they hid in their clothing.

"Hurry now, the horsemen are returning and the ship awaits at Rhymney!", he cried after them.
