

HATCH

The poster depicts a dramatic scene inside a stadium. A firefighter, wearing a red helmet and a red and yellow suit, is in the foreground, aiming a high-pressure water cannon. A massive plume of water is being discharged from the nozzle, creating a large splash. In the background, a person is being rescued from a fire, with water spraying around them. The stadium seating is visible, filled with spectators. The title 'HATCH' is prominently displayed at the top in a stylized, 3D font. The words 'Coming Soon' are written in a large, red, cursive font at the bottom.

Can you tackle a five strategy game on several levels? If you are reading this text you should have already purchased Football Manager 2 which is more superior than the world's best selling football game. This puts you in the league to play Hot Shot. So many skills are needed in Hot Shot because Hot Shot contains five games in one but more than this you need to attain peak performance at one level before graduating to the higher league.

The Oxford don's of the computer industry have created this futuristic arcade game. Their genius has incorporated the excitement of the days of the arena where gladiators fought for their lives as well as today's electronic wizardry of pinball which blasts you into a time warp – beaming you into the future where your skills really come into play. You start off in the big tank.

“Who's going to survive?” – you or your opponent?

If you're lucky you will move onto the next level. Where you've got to go for gold, here you've got to become a crackshot and also be able to control the ball and hit the gold blocks by bouncing the ball – it's not so easy, if you are good enough you can move into the black hole. With Hot Shot you need to be a Crackshot, an Ace, a Pinball Wizard and a master of the joystick. Remember, Hot Shot is to be released on the street after the 19th of August. You cannot buy it until then and you will be lucky to get it. So get your order in now from all leading stores.
